Summary:

The Quran is the central religious text of Islam, believed by Muslims to be a revelation from God. It is widely regarded as the finest work in classical Arabic literature. The Quran is divided into chapters (surah in Arabic), which are then divided into verses (ayah). Muslims believe that the Quran was verbally revealed by God to Muhammad through the angel Gabriel, gradually over a period of approximately 23 years, beginning on 22 December 609 CE, when Muhammad was 40, and concluding in 632, the year of his death.

The Quran is divided into 114 chapters of varying lengths, each known as a surah.

Chapters are classified either as Meccan or Medinan, depending on where and when the verses were revealed. The Meccan chapters generally deal with faith and scenes of the Hereafter, while the Medinan chapters are more concerned with organizing the social and political life of the nascent Muslim community. The Quran is also divided into 30 equal sections, called juz' (plural: ajiza).

The Quran is composed of verses (ayat) that make up 114 chapters (surahs) of unequal length which are classified either as Makkan or Madinan depending upon the place and time of their claimed revelation. The Quran's message is conveyed through the use of narrative, allegory, homily, and rhetoric. Its verses are marked by a rhythmic and poetic style that has been compared to that of the Hebrew Bible. The Quran is also divided into seven approximately equal parts, manzil, for it to be recited in a week's time.

The Quran is the primary source of every Muslim's faith and practice. It deals with all the subjects which concern us as human beings: wisdom, doctrine, worship, and law, but its basic theme is the relationship between God and His creatures. At the same time, the Quran provides guidelines for a just society, proper human conduct and an equitable economic system. The Quran is also divided into 114 chapters (surahs) and further divided into verses (ayat).
