Summary:

The Zend Avesta is a collection of sacred texts written by the ancient Persian prophet Zarathustra. It is the primary source of information about the religion of Zoroastrianism, which was founded by Zarathustra in the 6th century BCE. The Zend Avesta is divided into five parts: the Yasna, the Visparad, the Yashts, the Vendidad, and the Khordeh Avesta.

The Yasna is the primary liturgical text of the Avesta, and it contains hymns, prayers, and invocations to the gods. It is divided into 72 chapters, each of which is devoted to a particular deity. The Visparad is a collection of supplementary texts that provide additional information about the gods and their worship. The Yashts are hymns of praise to the gods, and the Vendidad is a collection of laws and regulations for the proper observance of Zoroastrianism. The Khordeh Avesta is a collection of prayers and invocations for daily use.

The Zend Avesta is an important source of information about the beliefs and practices of Zoroastrianism. It contains teachings on the nature of the gods, the creation of the world, the afterlife, and the proper way to live one's life.
