Summary:

Wonder is a novel by R.J. Palacio about a young boy named August Pullman who has a facial deformity. August is entering fifth grade at Beecher Prep, a private school in New York City, for the first time. He has been homeschooled by his parents, Isabel and Nate, since he was in kindergarten. August is nervous about attending school, as he has never been around other children his age before. He is also worried about how he will be treated by his peers due to his facial deformity.

August's first day of school is difficult. He is met with stares and whispers from his classmates, and he is quickly labeled as "the weird kid." Despite this, August makes a few friends, including Jack Will and Summer. He also meets Julian, a bully who is determined to make August's life miserable. August's teacher, Mr. Tushman, is very supportive and helps him adjust to school life.

Throughout the novel, August struggles with the challenges of being different. He is often teased and excluded by his peers, and he has to learn how to cope with these difficult situations. He also has to learn how to be brave and stand up for himself. Despite the difficulties, August finds strength in his family and friends, and he eventually learns to accept himself for who he is.

The novel ends with August feeling more confident and comfortable in his own skin. He has learned to embrace his differences and to be proud of who he is. He has also gained a better understanding of the importance of kindness and acceptance. Wonder is a powerful story about the importance of self-acceptance and the power of kindness.
